

The seaside reference seems appropriate, given the way the house is oriented toward the water. The lake is continually in view: ice floes in winter, lapping surf in summer. “It really does look like an ocean on most days,” says the wife. In the master bedroom, the glass walls turn the waves into a play of light and shadow, an almost cinematic image of calm. In a home full of serene, well designed spaces, this is her favorite place to be. “I love going there and seeing just a few tree limbs—and then nothing but water.” □

CLOCKWISE FROM FAR LEFT: The master suite includes a Spoon XL tub by Agape and vintage chairs by Gio Ponti for Cassina; the curtain fabric is by Knoll. The upstairs play area features a custom-made biomorphic ceiling light. In a child’s bedroom, the Caro Alto area rug is by Casalis, and the tufted floor lounge is from PBteen.
